Two Wilmots At LHS Mistaken For Twins

By Becky Lutz and Susie Woodward

"Are you twins?" This question has often been asked of Linda and Carl Wilmot, daughter and son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Wilmot, Lancaster Rt. 3. Linda and Carl have one sister Carol Ann, who is in the eighth grade at General Sherman Junior High School. Four dogs and two cats make up the rest of this family.

Blonde hair and hazel eyes are the only two common characteristics they share. Each one has a separate personality, school interests, and extra - curricular activities.

Linda keeps a high B average in her schedule of civics, choir, dramatics and speech, English, and shorthand. She is also secretary during one period to Mr. Walser, the agriculture teacher.

This summer Linda placed second in the county for the cotton dress she made in 4-H. She is a member of the Lucile's Lassies 4-H Club.

Since she plans to attend Ohio University this fall to study education, Linda finds that being vice-president of Future Teachers Club helps her tremendously. She is also a member of G. A. C. and is active in intramurals.

Like everyone else, she has her own list of favorites which she can name without hesitating. She likes the color grey and for food, pizza, of course. She is currently reading the book "Home From the Hill", which she is sure is one of the best that she has read lately. Linda also likes the record "Backbeat Symphony" and the movie, "A Summer Place".

Referring to the fact that Linda and Carl are both seniors but not twins, Linda said that her pet peeve is "People who want to know which one of us failed."

What senior girl will be graduating this June without taking a few favorite moments with her? Linda will never forget the time she was nominated for Homecoming Queen and when she attended the Junior - Prom this year.

Carl maintains A's and B's in A Cappella Choir, civics, biology, chemistry, and Ag IV.

He takes a very active part in the Future Farmers of America Club, of which he is past president, and has won many awards for his achievements in agriculture.

When it comes to favorites, Carl's list is quite different from Linda's. Among his many favorites are: Food, ice cream and pizza; color, blue; record, "Ties That Bind"; television program, "77 Sunset Strip"; movie, 'Pillow Talk", which starred Doris Day and Rock Hudson, who are Carl's favorite actress and actor.

As for his pet peeve, Carl says, "It makes me nervous when people try to tell me how to drive a car."

Carl stated, "I will always remember the Class of 1960's Senior Ball. It was the best ever."

After graduation, Carl plans to attend the Ohio State School of Agriculture, where he will study his major interest, farming.

Senior Plans

By Linda Kane
and Anne Trousdale

Watch out college, here we come! The class of '60 in Mr. Joseph Gabel's report room will invade the camp of many colleges throughout the state and country this fall. Ohio State University is the destination for most of this week's seniors.

Julianne Harris will study elementary education. Jim Hobbs is going into veterinary medicine and Dave Hegele plans to enter O S U to study pre-medicine. Architectural engineering and politics interest Robert Heft.

Also, Mary Lynne Fouse is going to Ohio State to prepare to become an English teacher. Ohio University and medical technology is on the agenda for Marilyn Geiger. Charlie Graf plans to go to barber college in Columbus, while Roy Griffith wants to eventually attend Columbus Business University. Miami University will be Bobbe Guelde's home this fall.

John Garber, after his summer job at the radio station, wishes to go on to school. Connie Hill and Bill Frasch are both going to attend Ohio Northern University, where Connie will study chemistry and Bill, pre - pharmacy. Roger Ford is going to college to study engineering. Ed Hart and Heath Harner also intend to go to college, although they have no definite one chosen as yet.

Offering the second largest field business seems to draw many seniors into its ranks. Jean Gerber wishes to become an airline hostess or a typist. Linda Foor and Grace Frank, along with Donna Graf, Joy Hale, and Linda Hart are planning to go into secretarial work.

Nola Hanson will probably work for two years, later going into an airline position. Sue Foshaugh, after she has worked enough to save some money, will attend a beauty s c h o o l. Barbara Hargus and Arletta Hiatt plan to go to beautician schools, also.

Next, the Armed Forces will occupy a large majority of time for several senior boys. Planning to join the Navy are Ron Gobel, Pat Harrison, Walter Hiatt, Robert Hoffman, and Smokey Hines. Jeff Hanison will enter the U.S. Air Force Academy or will study engineering at University of Cincinnati.

Larry Hendrickson is going to be an apprentice electrician. Martin Harvey is going to made farming a living, and Jim Harvey is going to be a mechanic. Danny Frear plans to become an apprentice mechanic and Jerry F o s n a u g h wants to get a factory job.

Highlighting s e n i o r plans is Dave Henry, who plans to lead a life of leisure, making $200 a week, sleeping 12 hours a day, and loafing the other 12 hours.

LHS Democrats Represent Texas At Mock Session

By Carolyn Solt

On March 26, a group of 30 Democrats journeyed to Capital University to attend a mock political convention. L. H. S. represented the state of Texas, and their candidate for n o m i n a t i o n was Texas's favorite son, Lyndon B. Johnson.

The delegation left Lancaster at 6:45 a. m. with a police escort, in six cars d e c o r a t e d with Texas flags and campaign signs for Johnson.

After registering, the 900 delegates from 54 Ohio schools paraded to the convention hall where the Democratic platform was proposed for adoption. U. S Representative Walter H. Moeller (D., Lancaster) spoke on "Why I'm a Democrat".

When a southern state proposed an amendment to put civil rights in control of the states, an argument developed. The amendment was voted down.

The afternoon session started with nomination speeches of the various candidates for the presidency. After each speech all of the delegates boosting the nominee were given 15 minutes for demonstrations. There were signs, confetti, noise - makers, ballons, and cheering in akundance.

The three top contending candidates were Senator John F. Dennedy (D. Massachusetts), Senator Lynden B. Johnson (D Texas), and Senator Stuart Symington (D. Missouri). Senator Symington won on the third roll call vote by receiving 418 votes, compared to 311 for Kennedy and 48 for Johnson. Many of the states that were backing Johnson changed to Symington on this third vote.

Another recess for the evening meal, and the delegates were back at the convention hall to nominate a candidate for vice president. The process was repeated and Senator Johnson came out on top by a unanimous choice halfway through the first roll call.

One of the delegates from L.H.S. said, "It was very interesting and I certainly learned a lot about the political conventions in the U. S.".

Another disaster this week is the matter of Jim Gilmore's broken foot. Sorry to hear of your mishap Jim, hope your foot is better soon.

Boy's Nerves Shaky When Taking Tuberculosis Test

The bell suddenly rang. Bob was frozen in his seat. It had come, the thing he had dreaded all through the weekend. Well, he mustn't show his friends how scared he was. Gosh, he was cold! Slowly he descended the stairs, turned to the right, stiffened, chewed a fingernail and faltered forward.

A solemn voice said, "You're the next one."

Gritting his teeth and looking the other way, Bob extended his arm. A slow hand moved up his forearm. Then a s h a r p, quick prick and it was over. Or was it? Looking at his arm, he saw that it was still there.

Later he strode back into the classroom, an air of supreme satisfaction on his face, and one arm uncovered. "Did it hurt?" his classmates asked in excited voices.

"Nothing to it," Bob replied as he caught the eye of the girl on the other side of the room. "We men have to take these things in stride."

The foregoing is a typical account of how Bob (and Betty, too) felt on taking the tuberculin test given March 21 at L. H. S.

Many juniors and seniors went to the auditorium for the ordeal. Each had been required to bring written permission from home. A white card was made out showing the pupil's name, age, address, phone number, report room teacher, and members of his family.

The report room teacher distributed these c a r d s to the students on the day they were to go to the auditorium. Seniors were called to take their tests during civics classes and juniors went during their English classes.

On Wednesday readings were taken to determine the results. Students showing any indication of tuberculosis germs will receive further examinations.

Seniors At LHS Choose Their Ideal Students

by Cordelia Fisher and Becky Lutz

Who is the ideal person? This was the question asked of many senior students at L. H. S. this week. If the boys could select their ideal girl she would have the eyes of Diana Arnold, hair of Penny McCune, smile of Fyanne Edwards, personality of J u d y Blaine, and dress like Donna Walton.

She would also have the figure of Nancy Vance, the sense of humor of Sue Parson, and the intelligence of Mary Lynn Fouse. She would have the walk of Jackie Mohler and Marilyn Geiger, and dance like Susie Stratton. A certain senior boy sums her up in one statement, "Wow! That would be SOME girl!!"

The girls were also given a chance to express their opinions about the ideal senior boy. He would have the hair of Phil Moyer, the eyes of Kenny Ball, the complexion of Dick Dickerson, the personality of Geoff Rendall, and the smile of Jim Markwood.

He would dress like Larry Redd, Glenn Kitchen and Dan Peterson, and dance like Mike Anders. The pick of the girls would also have the height of Jerry Shriner, the sense of humor of Tom Baker, Terry Farmer, and Ed Hart, the build of Chet Ridenour, the athletic ability of Randy Kidd, and Smokey Hines, and the intelligence of Stan Miller. The statement of one girl, "I sure would like to meet a guy like that" sums up the ideal senior boy.

THIS ATTRACTIVE display of various books currently on hand at the Lancaster High School Library was set up to remind students and faculty members that this is National Library Week. Books are our most worthwhile friends, said many of the teachers in their comments on literature, noted below.

LHS Students And Faculty Celebrate Library Week

By Becky Rainier

"I cannot live with books," said Thomas Jefferson. This quotation does not apply only to Jefferson, however. It applies to everyone, especially high school students. Those who have gone through high school know that a good library is necessary to enable one to do the research connected with school courses, and also to furnish an enjoyable source of relaxation.

Lancaster High School boasts the largest school library in Fairfield County and, according to Mrs Hannah McCauley, its library is unusually large for the size of the school.

Everyday, the guardian of the library, Hestor Bookworm, who makes her home on the top shelf in the library, watches approximately 300 students and teachers make use of the library material, which includes over 8000 books and 70 magazines.

In celebration of N a t i o n a l Library Week, a tea was held today in the library for faculty members.

By Hannah McCauley
LHS Librarian

Throughout my life books have been a great source of pleasure to me. From early childhood I was taught that books contain the only important treasures of mankind. Because I believe this, I cannot be casual about books, and I do not believe that anyone can be o v e r l y enthusiastic about books.

They are the means of passing on to the next generation the accumulated wisdom of the past. Human knowledge grows constantly; and the recording, preservation, and use of this knowledge is our greatest privilege and obligation.

The facts and ideas of human endeavor, in all of its many forms, are recorded in books. Personally, I derive a feeling of security and comfort from the realization that the achievements of numberless scholars have been preserved in our libraries for the use and benefit of the alert and curious minds of this generation.

By Ida Marie Neeley
English teacher

Books have created a world of entertainment, knowledge, and adventure for me. I have continually found joy in reading, but I have found that books that help me most are those which make me think the most.

Someone has said, "Books are lighthouses erected in the great sea of time." Through the years they have made bright my way, as a student, and they are now the main tools of my profession.

By Merlin C. Parent
Business Education Teacher

Books have been constant companions of mine during my entire lifetime. From books we learn about people and things.

We learn how people live and think and how they react under certain circumstances. We learn what is expected of us in a society as complex as ours is today. We learn that there is good and evil in the world and that those who are morally strong, sincere and law abiding must take their places in society to make our community and our country the best morally, spiritually, physically and mentally in the world.

We can make many friends through the books we read. One will also meet many people who are not d e s i r a b l e companions. Taken al t o g e t h e r these people make up the world we live in. If we fail to understand them, we are placed at a disadvantage in dealing with the people we meet in our daily living.

"Live by the book", seems to be a very good idea provided one reads the right books. Some of the fiction printed today can do nothing but harm. Other types of fiction can be extremely helpful in enabling one to learn about people and things as well as for enjoyment.

The same is true of all knowledge. If it is used by honest, sincere people for the good of people in general it is a wonderful thing. If it is used by selfish, inconsiderate individualists, it can be harmful.

The k n o w l e d g e to be gained from books is so vast and so varied that we can learn only a small portion of it. The Bible carries many messages that will be helpful to us in our daily livin, as well as to strengthen us spiritually. Law books set out the rules under which we must live in our society.

Books give us the fundamental knowledge we need to live by, in a pleasant and comfortable manner. Then there are books telling us how to get along well with our fellowmen.

Technical books d e a l i n g with science, business, industry, mechanics, etc. have made it possible for us to enjoy all the modern conveniences we have today. There is so much in books that one person can never learn even a small part of the things that makes ours the greatest civilization of all time.

If we fail to take this opportunity to learn what we can from books, we lose a great opportunity to increase our happiness and usefulness.

Mr. Merlin C. Parent

Much Ado About Yell Girl By Two Fans In Stands

Jackie Miller

Place; L. H. S. cheering section.

Event; Friday night basketball game.

"Characters"; two student spectators.

Nudge, nudge—"Say, just who is that cheerleader in the middle? I've seen her around before, and I've always wondered who she is."

"I'll say you've seen her around! That's Susie Stratton. I did a personality sketch on her for English and you should hear all that she is into!"

"Well, I figured she must have quite a lot to do, because she always seems to be going somewhere in a hurry. I know she doesn't know who I am, but she always speaks to me."

"Yes, that's the way she is. Listen to the schedule this kid carries — her subjects are physics World History, English, civics and choir. Then she is president of Future Nurses; head usherette; secretary of the cheerleaders; a member of Junior Hospital Twig Four and does volunteer work at the hospital every week.

Susie is on the student council, and she is active in G. A. C. and intramurals. She holds the position of Grand Cross of Color in the Rainbow for Girls. Through her Y-Teen membership, Susie went to the State Y-Teen Summer Conference last year, and was elected to the planning committee for the 1960 conference. (l o n g d e e p breath)

"Good heavens! Does she run on A. C. or D. C. current?"

"Neither — j u s t very thick, chocolate milkshakes or waffles with sausage."

"I've seen that blue Pontiac she drives sitting in front of 924 King St. That must be where she lives. Say, is John Stratton her brother?"

"Yep"

"Oh!"

(B r e a k in conversation while L. H. S. scores)

"I'll bet you haven't seen that Pontiac in front of her home very often, because during her spare time she likes to "mess around" with the gang or go swimming, skiing, horseback riding, skating or sledding.

W h e n e v e r she is at home, though, she says she likes to sew knit and play the bongo drums. One thing that gets her goat a little is that she can't play "Greensleeves", her favorite song, on the bongos very well.

"How did she ever get started in cheerleading?"

"Well, she told me that she loves to watch sports, and when she was younger, it used to make her angry when she saw the lack of enthusiasm among the spectators. She always wanted to get out there and make them yell."

"What's she like?" "Well she's really a bug for getting things done. One of her friends said that Susie's the only person she knows who has so much to do, but really dives in and does it.

Her advice to sophomores for success in high school is "never put anything off." Another of her friends said, "She's always ready for anything, and if anybody is going to come up with an idea for something different or really fun, it'll be Susie". She likes people who can get along with others in any situation.

She's going to attend the University of Cincinnati next year because she wants to be a specialized nurse. Oh, and her greatest desire is for w o r l d peace and unity.

(much shuffling)

"Oh, the game's over."

"What game?"
